

The future was... Then?

From the earliest days of the automobile, there has been a question of what power these new contraptions. The first gasoline engines were cantankerous and often caught fire or exploded. Steam engines enjoyed a brief popularity as did battery powered electric cars and trucks. The problem with steam was it took too long to get moving (one had to wait for the steam pressure to build up). The electric autos suffered from what still troubles the electric car- short range. The early lead batteries took up a lot of space and offered a very short range. Modern batteries have improved these issues a great deal, though.

When the gas turbine engine was born in the 1930's, it was envisioned for aeronautical use. After the end of WWII, there was a boom of turbine engine development, it was the engine of the future. Much like the early days of jet powered aircraft, it seems that several automobile companies were working on a turbine powered car. Britain's Rover would be the first with the Jet 1 in 1950. That company would reskin the car in 1952 for better aerodynamics and set some land speed records. General Motors began testing the first of their four Firebird concepts in 1953. These Firebirds really did breathe fire! Even FIAT had the Turbina, which was shown in 1954, an amazing feat considering there were very few turbine engine experts in Italy at that time.

The 1960's would bring more experimental gas turbine cars and trucks. Most famous is the Chrysler Turbine car. It was first seen by the public in 1962 with its stylish body designed by Ghia, and of course powered by a Chrysler gas turbine. This would be the first and only time that the general public could own one of these cars of the future. Fifty cars would be loaned to consumers for testing and evaluation in a real world environment. These tests lasted from 1963 and 1966 and 203 people would have the opportunity to envision the future. Chrysler would continue experimenting with the gas turbine until the early 1980's. There were other turbine powered cars from Ford, GM and Chrysler, and even Toyota, but the problems were the same. High fuel consumption, expensive engine materials, and the high operating temperatures (fire hazard) doomed the gas turbine for automotive use. So what was the point? Gas turbines can run on almost any liquid fuel source and develops a great deal of power compared to the engine's weight.

The gasoline powered piston engine has become reliable and thanks to computerized controls, very efficient. Pair it with an electric motor, the hybrid is even more efficient and it too has proved to be reliable.

FROM THE PRESIDENT by Rockne Riddlebarger

Greetings Model Citizens! On October 18th Kevin Ballenger and I attended the monthly meeting of the Wright Field Scale Modelers (IPMS) club. We both took models for display and participated in the seminar on aging and weathering of models. The general flow of the meeting was very much like ours, reports from the club officers, discussion about their model show and contest for next April and door prizes (Kevin won one). The biggest difference was that many of the members worked on models during the meeting. We had a very pleasant meal and talked with a group of the guys after the meeting. All in all, it was a very nice encounter. We invited them to come to one of our meetings in the future and several of them were open to that. We will look forward to it.

NOTICE: At the November meeting we will be taking nominations for the offices of News Editor, Vice President and Secretary. If you have the energy and will to take on one of these positions then please step forward, it is fine to nominate yourself.

See you on November the 9th for the End of the Year Contest. You can find the eligibility list elsewhere in this newsletter and on our website.

V.P. VIEWS by Randy Wilson

Group,

I'm saddened to inform the club of C.A.R. past President Jim Lindsey's passing. I'm sure some of our more senior members hold fond memories of this "gentle giant" and his contributions to the Club's early days. Jim was President for a short, but important time of our history. He was the driving force behind "CINCINNATI CHALLENGE 1".

He was well known and well liked in the modeling community in Oklahoma, Ohio and Indiana. Jim died in March this year, I'm not sure why the news took so long to get here.

See ya on Monday for the BIG SHOW.

Anyone check out the new Starsky and Hutch Torino from Revell? It's not a bad looking kit, but is a bit simplified though. I'm not crazy about it being molded in red, but this kit is aimed at the casual builder and TV/ movie memorabilia collector. I also would have preferred a 1972 model over the 1974-1976 model which the kit represents, these have the heavier (and ugly 5 mph bumpers on them. A 1970's Torino was on my wish list so I'll quit complaining... Me and several other club members ventured up to Dayton for the CARB's annual contest. It was a great turnout and I know Rockne, Curtis, and Marshall all went home with some awards. Congratulations to all of them.

The club celebrated its 30th anniversary last month. During the September meeting, Paul Snodgrass was given a plaque thanking him for starting the club (sorry I'm late with this). Paul, needless to say, was taken aback, and mentioned that all he did was place a small add in the back of Scale Auto Enthusiast way back in 1985. He also said it was the club members were the ones who made the club happen and continue for thirty years.

On that note some of the early members who are still active with the club: Paul Snodgrass, Randy Wilson, Robb Shelby, Marshall King, Bill Bench, Chad Selvaggio (he was a youngster, his father Tom was an early member)
